Sequoya New Name Of Literary Magazine

Hear, oh big Chiefs! On this day of April 14, 1960, the newest member of the publications department will make its great Indian name known. From this day hence, the "Papoose" shall be called the Sequoya.

D. J. Cook, CHS junior, submitted the chosen name. He came across it while he was looking through some Indian names. Sequoya gave the alphabet to the Indians so they would have a system of writing for their sounds; hence they had a system of written communication.

The staff wanted an Indian name that was not too lengthy but yet had a melodious sound.

The Sequoya will make its debut today when it will be distributed to the Chiefs, free of charge, in their English classes. It will consist of poems, short stories, book reviews, essays, and features. It will also be illustrated. There will be thirty-two pages in this issue of the magazine.
